Family receives 'overwhelming' support from locals after fire

LOWER SACKVILLE

Neighbour burst through burning home to warn them

Yvette d'Entremont
Metro | Halifax

From pulling a young boy out of a burning room to "overwhelming" donations, the community of Lower Sackville is rallying around a family whose home was destroyed by a weekend fire.

On Sunday night Kelly Wilson, eight-year-old Kuper and his father were in their Contessa Court home, unaware the back of the house was rapidly being engulfed by flames.

Neighbour Deborah Stevens, who could see directly into the Wilsons' backyard, noticed fire consuming the back of the house.

Wilson's older son Brady Elliot-Hebert lives next door to his mother. He said Stevens burst through a locked door to warn the family.

"Deborah ran into the burning building to save them ... She passed her baby to her husband and said, 'I gotta go.' She ran into the house and screamed 'There's a fire outside. Your back is engulfed.

Brady Elliot-Hebert started a GoFundMe page after his mother Kelly Wilson's (right) house burned down on Contessa Court in Sackville. JEFF HARPER/METRO

Get out of your house," Elliot-Hebert said.

"Mom said 'What's going on?' And Deborah said 'I'm grabbing Kuper. Get out.' She ran into a room that was completely engulfed in fire to save Kuper, my little brother."

Elliot-Hebert said his mother's house was destroyed by fire in about three and a half minutes. They lost all their belongings and didn't have renter's insurance.

But he said the community of Sackville began to rally around the family "just minutes" after the blaze.

One neighbour gave up his driveway for the family to place salvageable items, someone brought food, another gave Kuper bubbles to play with and the family dog was taken care of.

In two-and-a-half days, a GoFundMe page started by Elliot-

Hebert had already raised more than $1,500 of its $5,000 goal.

This is in addition to clothing, food, cash and other donations regularly being dropped off at 48 Contessa Court, the house where Elliot-Hebert lives. It's next door to the burnt structure that was Wilsons' home.

He said Kuper was delighted that strangers went out of their way to ensure he had school supplies in time for his first day of school Thursday.

"He has been overwhelmed and is so excited about everything... He said 'Everybody loves us. They've done so much,'" Elliot-Hebert said.

"One lady brought in 200 pieces of Lego for him and he goes 'I lost all my other ones. Thank you!' and he ran up and gave her a hug in the middle of my driveway. People are thinking about everything."

Everything from a microwave to pizza pockets have been dropped off.

"My partner said you wouldn't get this in any other community. You just wouldn't... Sackville is such a different place," Elliot-Hebert said.

"People we don't even know are coming to the door and saying, 'Here. It's all I have. It's not a lot. Here's $20.' It has been amazing. We're overwhelmed."

THINGS TO DO IN HALIFAX THIS WEEKEND

From Italian culture to Gottingen and Colour festivals, there is no shortage of fun to be found in the city.

Haley Ritchie
Metro | Ottawa

1 Mighty bright

Join in the all-ages Halifax Colour Festival this Sunday from noon to 5 p.m. where crowds in white T-shirts will play games and toss lots of bright colours at one another in the Dalhousie University quad. There will be music, a water balloon fight, and tug of war. The hosts, Indian Festivals Club of Nova Scotia, says the event represents the major Holi festival of South Asia, which is about spreading love and joy amongst all people. Tickets range from $20-$40 for adults and kids below five are free.

3 Viva Italia

Head to Agricola Street for a taste of Italy this weekend at the Italian Canadian Cultural Association of Nova Scotia's Italian Weekend, where there will be bocce, face painting, language lessons, movies, wine tasting and a pasta-eating contest. Don't miss delicious food like cannoli, tiramisu, lasagna, pizza, gnocchi and much more over three days. Events run 5 to 10 p.m. Friday, 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday, and 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Sunday.

4 Kermesse time

Kids and people of all ages are invited to the annual Kermesse Fun Fair on Saturday in support of the IWK Health Centre featuring jumpy castles, Shriner clowns, stilt walkers, games, prizes, food, crafts, displays and raffles. There's also a silent auction in the Parker Reception Room. The fair runs from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. rain or shine, and if it starts to pour all activities will be moved inside.

Boil water advisory for school

EDUCATION

Low chlorine readings are traced to faulty well pump

Rebecca Dingwell
For Metro | Halifax

Students at Five Bridges Junior High School weren't drinking from the water fountain on their first day back.

The Hubley school was placed under a boil water advisory earlier in the week due to low chlorine readings.

The Halifax Regional School Board (HRSB) is supplying the school with bottled water until the advisory is lifted.

According to HRSB spokesman Doug Hadley, the issue was traced to a problem with the pump in the well.

"It was malfunctioning, which caused the chlorinator not to function properly," Hadley said Thursday.

The pump is now fixed. A water sample was taken Thursday morning, and another will be taken Friday.

"If the chlorine level is back within the acceptable range, then the advisory will be lifted, probably early next week," Hadley said.

Hadley couldn't recall a similar situation happening recently, but he said it is something that occurs in schools from time to time.

"The school sent a note last night just to make (parents) aware," he said.

"Typically, parents are understanding and they just appreciate being kept in the loop."

Students feel strain of hikes

EDUCATION

Province has second-highest tuition fees in the country

Rebecca Dingwell
For Metro | Halifax

As the school year kicks off in Halifax, some students are already trying to figure out how to deal with rising tuition fees.

On Thursday, the Maritime Provinces Higher Education Commission (MPHEC) released a report on the increasing costs.

NSCAD University is currently facing the highest increase in the Maritimes at 11.6 per cent, bringing their average arts degree to $7,098.

That report came at the heels of the Statistics Canada release, which outlines fees across the whole country. The statistics put Nova Scotia in second place for highest average tuition fees ($7,298 when it comes to an undergrad degree).

N.S. is topped only by Ontario, where fees average at $8,114.

"It's a lot of money to pay, and it affects every student," said Peter Black, who is just starting his first year at Dalhousie.

He hasn't had to dish out all the dough yet — but he hopes a combination of work, scholarships and help from his parents will add up.

According to MPHEC, undergraduate students at Dal pay an average of $7,200 and $8,169 for sciences.

Samiya Dottin, an international student from Barbados, feels there's not much that can be done when fees go up.

"They say, 'we're gonna hike it,' and we're like, 'that sucks,'" she said. "You sort of just have to pay it, because you just have to get your education."

For Dal's international students, the cost averages at $16,164 for arts and $17,133 for sciences.

Charlotte Kiddell is the chairperson for the Nova Scotia's branch of the Canadian Federation of Students (CFS-NS). Although the school year has just begun, she feels the students are already stressing about what they'll have to pay.

"I think students are already feeling the strain of this tuition increase," Kiddell said in an interview on Thursday.

"A number of students are back on campus, starting to pay their tuition and realizing: 'Oh, this was a lot more than I was paying last year.'"

The StatsCan data says fees in Nova Scotia have on average gone up 5.6 per cent since the previous school year.

Kiddell said many students need to take on extra work to earn money, and therefore have less time to dedicate to

+ TRENDS

Biggest jump

NSCAD fees increased by 11.6 per cent for undergrads, while graduate students face a 29.7 per cent hike.

Downward trend

The number of Nova Scotians pursuing post-secondary education in the province has decreased by 18.5 per cent over the last 10 years.

classes. There are also the long-term consequences.

"Looking forward over the next few years, it looks like students graduating with record levels of debt," she explained, adding that grads will be entering the workforce with that on their backs.

"(This) means students are often pressured to take on low-quality work — often precarious work — just to chip away at that mountain of debt."

Kiddell also pointed out that folks in marginalized communities tend to feel the effects of high tuition the most.

"We see a disproportionate number of people from Indigenous communities, from newcomer communities (and) from low-income families who aren't able to access post-secondary education now," she said.

How are Halifax students making ends meet?

REBECCA DINGWELL FOR METRO

I apply for student loans and I don't actually use them, but I do receive bursaries because I apply for them. If I need them, they're there, but if not I just pay them off at the end of the year.

I reduced my meal plan... now I have 10 meals a week, so I'll probably start cooking.

I work a little. I applied for some scholarships and my parents help me out a little. So, a bunch of different things.

ANNAPOLIS VALLEY

Youth jail riot probe launched

Nova Scotia's justice minister says her department has launched an investigation into why a riot erupted at a youth jail, injuring five staff members.

Diana Whalen says she's concerned about the Sunday evening melee, and has directed staff to look into issues like staff training levels and the operations of the Waterville facility's health and safety committee.

"We need to look into it ... It will take about six weeks for us to get all of the information in and report back," she said after meeting with cabinet on Thursday.

She declined to comment on any details about the incident.

One 18-year-old man is charged with taking part in a riot and two counts of assault while carrying a weapon, while a 19-year-old man is charged with taking part in a riot and damage to property.

Two 17-year-old males were also arrested, and later returned to the youth facility in the Annapolis Valley.

Four injured youth workers were taken to hospital with what the Justice Department described as serious injuries and later released, and another

“Youth workers should not fear for their lives when they go to work.”

Jason MacLean

staff member was treated at the scene by paramedics.

Whalen said there isn't a problem with staffing levels or overcrowding at the facility, as the ratios have increased in recent years — and there is a children's mental health unit at the facility.

"This is the first time in over 30 years there's been an incident like that at Waterville. This is absolutely unprecedented and unusual. We want to learn lessons from it and find ways from allowing it to happen again," she said.

However, the president of the Nova Scotia Government and General Employees Union, says his union is concerned about security levels at the facility.

"Youth workers should not fear for their lives when they go to work," said Jason MacLean.

The union has said one of the workers was attacked, and when coworkers came to help, they were rushed and beaten by youth offenders who were able to open the doors in their rooms at the same time in a co-ordinated way.

MacLean, a corrections worker before becoming the union leader, said in an interview that if he'd known about the door system, he would have asked it be changed to prevent offenders from exiting simultaneously.

MacLean also said union members have told him that management had been alerted to the risk of keeping a volatile mix of young people together and of threats to staff in the days leading up to the incident.

The union president said female and male youth workers had received broken bones and serious cuts in the attack, but declined to provide further details.

MacLean said he plans to meet with the staff and offer support on Thursday evening.

"The health and safety of the women and men who work in the facility should be the priority of the employer and we have reached out to them looking for answers," he said.

POLITICS

Poll shows 56 per cent prefer premier and his party in N.S.

Haley Ryan
Metro | Halifax

The Liberals remain the most preferred party in Nova Scotia by a wide margin, according to a new survey.

New numbers from Halifax-based Corporate Research Associates Inc. (CRA) show 56 per cent of those surveyed prefer the Liberal Party, compared with 59 per cent in May.

The Progressive Conservatives have the support of 22 per cent of people (compared with 21 per cent in May).

About two in 10 prefer the NDP at 19 per cent, compared with 18 per cent last survey. Two per cent preferred the Green Party, which is the same as last quarter.

The number of undecided Nova Scotians sits at 28 per cent, compared with 31 per cent last quarter, while seven per cent wouldn't state a preference, and three per cent either support none of the parties or do not plan to vote.

Satisfaction with the performance of Stephen McNeil's Liberal government stands at 58 per cent, (up slightly from 55 per cent in May 2016), while 35 per cent are dissatisfied, the same as last quarter.

In terms of leaders, 43 per cent prefer Premier Stephen McNeil compared to 41 per cent three months ago, while 18 per cent support Jamie Baillie of the PC Party, compared with 19 per cent in May.

Preference for Gary Burrill of the NDP slightly at 14 per cent from 11 per cent, while interim leader Thomas Trappenberg of the Green Party is at two per cent (compared to 3 per cent in May).

The results are part of the CRA Atlantic Quarterly, a phone survey of Atlantic Canadians, based on a sample of 802 adult Nova Scotians.

'It's a question of solidarity'

AIRLINE COMPLAINT

Non obese can stand up for rights of obese — appeals court

You don't need to be obese to stand up for the rights of obese people, the Federal Court of Appeal has ruled in a case over "discriminatory" airline seating policies.

The appeal court ordered the Canadian Transportation Agency to take another look at a passenger rights advocate's complaint over Delta Airlines' policy of bumping obese travellers or making them buy two seats. The agency had dismissed Gabor Lukacs' complaint because it found he didn't have standing since he was not obese and wasn't directly affected by the practice.

"I'm very pleased with this decision," Lukacs said Thursday before heading into a classroom at Dalhousie University, where he teaches mathematics. "It recognizes the basic moral principle that you are allowed to stand up for the rights of others. It is a simple question of solidarity."

In its 16-page decision Wednesday, the federal appeal court

Gabor Lukacs argued in federal court on Monday that even though he is not overweight himself, he should have the right to file a complaint about a carrier's "discriminatory" practice of bumping obese travellers or making them pay for two seats. ANDREW VAUGHAN/THE CANADIAN PRESS unanimously agreed that the agency erred in law. The three-member panel found that the fact that someone may not be directly affected by a practice should not prevent them from filing a complaint.

"If the objective is to ensure that air carriers provide their services free from unreasonable or unduly discriminatory practices, one should not have to wait until having been subjected to such practices before being allowed to file a complaint," the panel wrote.

"There is no sound reason to limit standing...to those with a direct, personal interest in the matter." The agency said in an email statement it is reviewing the decision and could not comment. Lukacs said that while the decision deals with one particular issue, it could open the door to more people being able to file complaints with the agency, a quasi-judicial tribunal mandated to provide consumer protection for air passengers and ensure accessible transportation.

"From now on the Canadian Transportation Agency cannot toss out a complaint on the grounds of standing," said Lukacs, who was awarded $750 to be paid by the agency. "It will have to look at whether the complaint has some merit."

The complaint stemmed from a 2014 email from a Delta customer care agent to a passenger

+ BACKGROUND

At the time he filed the appeal in April, Gabor Lukacs argued that dismissing his complaint simply because the issue didn't affect him personally was akin to disregarding someone's concerns over contaminated food just because they weren't made sick by it.

As well, he said he has a demonstrated expertise in the area of passenger issues, having filed more than two dozen successful complaints with the agency and, as a result, bringing about improvements to the industry. THE CANADIAN PRESS who felt he was "cramped" on a flight by a large passenger. The passenger notified Delta, which provided him with an explanation of the airlines guidelines.

In apologizing to the man, Delta said it sometimes asks large passengers to move to an area of the plane where there is more room, "purchase additional seats," or take another flight.

Delta did not respond to a request for comment. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Warship design requests delayed

A senior official with the Canadian Forces says there's been a slight delay in issuing a complex request to industry for an off-the-shelf design of the country's next generation of warships.

Pat Finn, the assistant deputy minister of material, said Thursday the request for proposals for the Canadian surface combatant vessels — originally expected to be issued this month — will now be going out before mid-October to allow bidders a last chance to make suggestions on the design criteria. Finn said during an interview at a conference in Halifax that Defence is working with the prime contractor, Irving Shipbuilding, to produce over 1,500 pages of specifications for the Royal Canadian Navy ships.

The warships will replace the Halifax class frigates and Iroquois class destroyers and may still be steaming off Canadian waters by 2070, said the former navy admiral. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Commissionaires being replaced as airport security

After almost 60 years of providing security services at Halifax-Stanfield International Airport, the Commissionaires are being replaced.

In a media release issued on Thursday afternoon, Commissionaires Nova Scotia CEO Bruce Belliveau said he was "surprised" and "very disappointed" the Halifax International Airport Authority had chosen not to partner with his not-for-profit company anymore.

The airport authority issued its Request for Proposals for Security, Security Operations, and Parking and Curbside Services in April. Following a competitive proposal assessment process, another service provider was selected.

On Wednesday, CBC Nova Scotia reported that Toronto-based security firm G4S Canada will take over the contract Jan. 1, 2017. The Commissionaire's contract ends at midnight on Dec. 31. The Commissionaires were informed of the decision July 27. "We understand this was a purely business decision on their part; however, it directly impacts the livelihood of the 160 commissionaires working there," Belliveau said in the release.

"I am extraordinarily proud of the work our people have performed," Belliveau added.

Eastlink unveils new 'portable' TV app

TECHNOLOGY

Customers will be able to watch programs on tablets, phones

Halifax-based cable provider Eastlink unveiled an app Thursday that will allow users to stream live television and on-demand content on smartphones, tablets and computers.

The app, called Eastlink Stream, was developed in collaboration with tech giant Cisco using its service provider video software.

Dan MacDonald, Eastlink's vice-president of marketing, said what makes the product different from similar applications is the user's ability to call up additional apps through swiping with a single finger to watch or gain access to content.

He said the idea is to eliminate navigating between TV websites and different apps.

"This functionality of swiping is very unique," said MacDonald. "Most applications in this category you have to do multiple clicks and a bit of a clunky experience to get what you are looking for."

MacDonald said the application is intuitive and easy to use and will give the company's users direct access to what is "portable television."

He says the offering is essential for the company, given that 72 per cent of all of its network's

Internet traffic involves some type of video.

Eastlink CEO Lee Bragg said the technology is about keeping up with consumer's habits and demands.

"We know that consumers are watching more video than ever before," Bragg said. "Discovering and subscribing to that content across numerous platforms has become time consuming and very expensive."

The company said the app is

Liberals stump for peacekeeping plan

MILITARY

Opposition says UN has shown itself unable to run missions

Battle lines are being drawn between Liberals and Conservatives as the government prepares to deploy hundreds of Canadian troops to an as-yet-unannounced United Nations peacekeeping mission in Africa.

The pending clash, which is breaking along ideological lines, was previewed Thursday and is expected to figure prominently when the House of Commons returns from its summer break later this month.

At a peacekeeping summit in London, Defence Minister Harjit Sajjan affirmed the government's plan to make up to 600 soldiers and 150 police officers available for peace operations. The government will also spend $450 million on peace support projects, and will host a similar peacekeeping summit next year.

"Supporting and encouraging peace is certainly part of what it means to be Canada," Sajjan told counterparts from around the world.

But even as Sajjan was touting the return of Canadian blue berets, Conservative defence critics James Bezan and Pierre Paul-Hus were in Ottawa taking shots at the UN's record on peacekeeping, and the Liberal government's motives for pursuing such a mission.

Raising the spectre of peacekeeping failures including Rwanda and Bosnia, which many Canadians still remember, the Tories said the UN hasn't proven itself capable of managing peacekeeping missions.

Instead, Bezan held up Canada's participation in the U.S.-led war against Daesh as an example of a proper military mission. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Clement rejects values testing

Conservative leadership candidate Tony Clement says he will propose enhanced security screening for immigrants — but not a values test — as part of a broader plan for countering the threat of terrorism.

"If we can give our security personnel the right tools to identify potential threats to our country, then I believe that is exactly what we should be doing and quite frankly, that is where the threat is," Clement said Thursday as he shared part of the national security platform he plans to unveil in greater detail next week.

The Ontario MP and former cabinet minister initially declined to get into the debate over a proposal from leadership rival Kellie Leitch to vet immigrants and refugees for their views on what she calls anti-Canadian values.

But with discussion over the Leitch proposal still dominating the otherwise sleepy leadership campaign and other candidates speaking up, Clement said Thursday he decided to comment to keep the issue from overshadowing his policy announcement next week.

Clement said Leitch's "trial balloon" is not the right approach. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Search for lost fishermen continues into third day

TRAGEDY

Four men were onboard vessel capsized off N.L. coast

Walking the floor boards with worry and praying for a miracle: it's a sadly repeated ritual in Newfoundland where the sea gives life and, just as swiftly, takes it away.

"We live that life and that's who we are," said Johanna Ryan Guy, as the search for two of four men who went missing from a capsized fishing boat continued Thursday near St. John's.

Bodies of the other two men were recovered after the seven-metre craft was reported overturned Tuesday night near Cape Spear. All were from the close community of Shea Heights, where grieving residents say it's beyond tragic that three generations of one family were on that boat.

A team of investigators with the Transportation Safety Board (TSB) is now looking into the deadly incident.

As in all maritime communities, dangers in the waters off Newfoundland are real and unpredictable.

"These are the risks that we take every other day," said Ryan Guy. "It never lessens anything that happens. It really, really doesn't."

"We're so close-knit, and eastern Newfoundland.

Tuesday marked the 12th anniversary of their last departure from home in nearby St. Brendan's before their final trip ended in disaster.

The TSB found the vessel's stability was affected by a flawed design, creating problems that weren't fully understood by the owners, its builders or Transport Canada.

Accidents happen quickly and often without warning, said Ryan Guy, whose heart goes out to the loved ones of the men lost this week.

"We all feel for the family. I know people felt for us as well," she said. "This could have been anybody in Newfoundland."

Fish, Food and Allied Workers-Union, the union representing harvesters and plant workers in the province, offered its condolences in a statement Thursday.

"This latest tragedy is a heartbreaking reminder of how dangerous the profession of fishing is and how unforgiving the sea from which so many earn their living can be."

The TSB, in its recent report into three crab fishing deaths in 2015 on Placentia Bay, said there were 189 deaths involving commercial fishing vessels between 2000 and 2015 in Canada — 31 of them in Newfoundland and Labrador alone.

"The number of accidents involving loss of life on fishing vessels remains too high," it said.

Provincial politicians of all stripes joined forces four years ago to protest when the former Conservative government under Stephen Harper shuttered the maritime rescue sub-centre in St. John's. Ottawa at the time defended the move, saying technology allowed for money-saving consolidation of services without cutting safety.

BILL C-51

Grits seek input on terror law

The Liberal government's promised changes to a controversial anti-terrorism law likely won't come until next year, once officials have digested an array of public suggestions on revamping national security measures.

The government opened an online consultation Thursday, soliciting feedback on everything from sharing information and preventing attacks to conducting surveillance and ensuring intelligence agencies are accountable.

The consultation, which can be found at canada.ca/national-security-consultation, runs until Dec. 1.

Public Safety Minister Ralph Goodale told a news conference in Edmonton the government also hopes House of Commons and Senate committees will hold public hearings on the national security framework.

It means any legislation flowing from these reviews would not be tabled until December at the earliest and more likely in late winter or spring 2017.

In the 2015 election campaign, the Liberals promised to repeal "problematic elements" of omnibus security legislation, known as Bill C-51, ushered in by the previous Conservative government.

The bill gave the Canadian Security Intelligence Service explicit powers to disrupt terrorist threats and not just gather information about them.

GUN VIOLENCE

Texas teen dead after shooting student

A 14-year-old girl died of an apparent self-inflicted gunshot wound Thursday after shooting and injuring another female student inside a high school in West Texas, according to the local sheriff.

Authorities did not release a possible motive for the gunfire that erupted shortly before 9 a.m. at Alpine High School in Alpine, a town of 5,900 about 220 miles southeast of El Paso. The shooting was followed by a series of unrelated threats made by a male caller that added to the chaos of the morning and diverted law enforcement from the high school.

"That's ridiculous for someone to call in something like this when we've got this situation going on," Brewster County Sheriff Ronny Dodson told radio station KVLB.

The sheriff said the family of the girl who died had moved to the Alpine area about six months ago. She was a freshman at the school.

Dodson said the injured student ran outside seeking help and was taken to a hospital with injuries that weren't considered life-threatening.

In interview, nominee recalls some formative experience

Rebecca Williams

Hillary Clinton spoke openly in a new interview published by Humans of New York Thursday.

The Democratic presidential nominee retold a story about taking a law admissions test at Harvard and having to endure heckling by her male counterparts.

"My friend and I were some of the only women in the room, I was feeling nervous," she says. "And while we're waiting for the exam to start, a group of men began to yell at us ... it turned into a real 'pile on.' One of them even said: 'If you take my spot, I'll get drafted, and I'll go to Vietnam, and I'll die.'"

Clinton went on to perhaps challenge some of her critics head-on concerning her "aloofness."

"But I had to learn as a young woman to control my emotions ... And sometimes I think I come across more in the 'walled-off' arena. And if I create that perception, then I take responsibility."

The nominee's open comments about the balance between needing to "protect yourself" while not wanting to "seem 'walled off'" struck a chord with some women online.

"Women all over the world know this as fact, all too much. Be quiet, but not too quiet. Be smart, but not too smart ... it goes on and on," wrote a woman by the name of Michelle Jenkins in one of the top comments on the Humans of New York's Facebook post of the interview.

Price is about 8 per cent higher than south of border

Even after allowing for currency exchange, Canadians will pay more than their American neighbours for the latest iteration of the iPhone.

The differential on top of an adjustment for the strong U.S. dollar adds about eight per cent to the list price of the just-announced iPhone 7 series — without a contract and depending on the handset's size and storage capacity, said Sentry Investments vice-president Andy Nasr.

That calculation is for an iPhone 7, which is largely similar to the iPhone 6, although it boasts improved camera

BROADCASTING

Skinny basic TV under fire

The national broadcast regulator should ban TV providers from removing bundling discounts from customers who opt for mandated, cut-rate, basic TV service, consumer groups told hearings Thursday.

The call came as both the Public Interest Advocacy Centre and the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission revealed they had been "threatened" by at least two service providers over information posted online that was designed to aid consumers in finding better TV services.

Removing bundling discounts amounts to discrimination and runs contrary to the intent of new rules designed to provide consumers with greater choice and flexibility in buying TV services, said PIAC executive director John Lawford.

"We believe practices such as the removing of the availability of bundling discounts and of certain services, including video-on-demand and free previews, subject certain basic service subscribers to an undue disadvantage, which is not justified," Lawford told the CRTC.

"These practices deter customers from switching or subscribing to the skinny basic."

Airbnb on Thursday apologized for its slow response to accusations of racism and outlined new policies to combat the problem, including reducing the prominence of photos in the booking process.

The company also plans to automatically block future reservations for dates where a host has told someone that a property was unavailable.

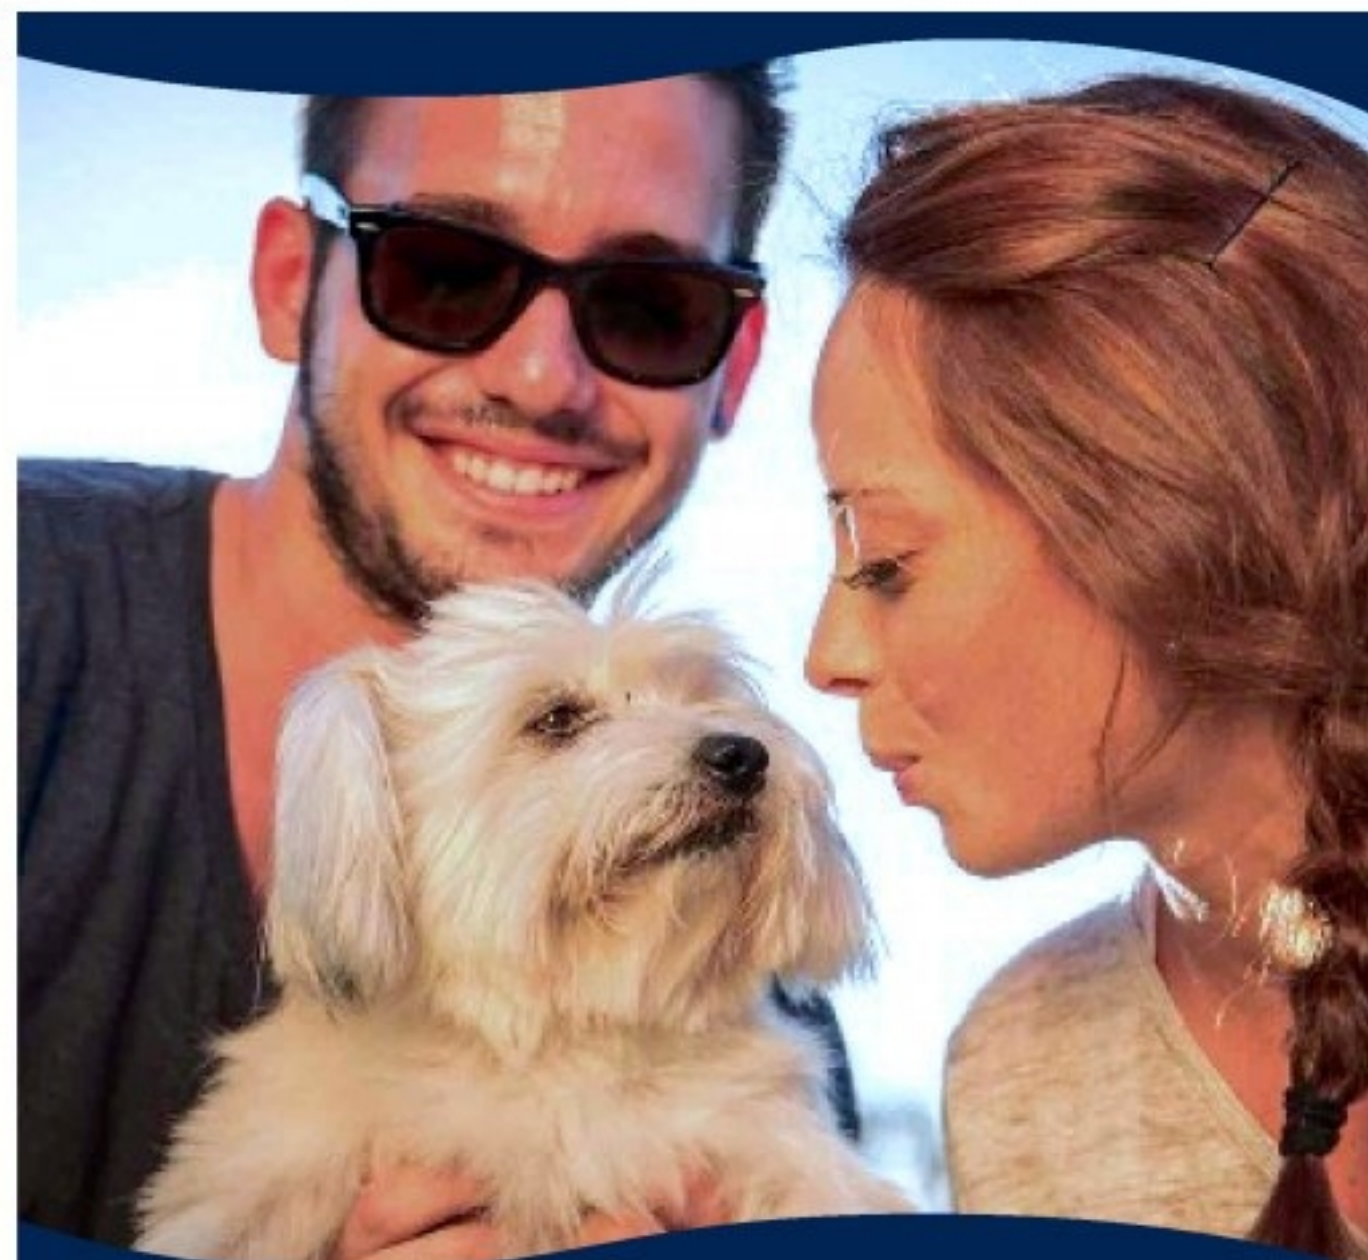

Numerous anecdotes on social media with the hashtag #AirbnbWhileBlack recounted incidents in which African-American guests were told listings were unavailable for the

"We have been slow to address these problems, and for this I am sorry," said Airbnb co-founder and CEO Brian Chesky in a message published on the vacation rental website's blog.

Airbnb did not bow to critics' requests that they remove profile photos entirely so that hosts can't reject guests based on appearance, saying photos are an important security feature so hosts can recognize guests when they check in.

Should I be freaked out by double yolks?

I got six double-yolked eggs in one carton. Why would this happen? Are they safe? It seemed like an overdose of hormones or something to me, so I threw them out just in case. — Deena, Toronto

I put your question to Frank Robinson, a professor of poultry physiology at the University of Alberta who calls himself a "chicken gynecologist." He said you have nothing to worry about, and what you found wasn't even unusual. "I've had this question a couple of times," he said. "You get double-yolked eggs in two situations. One is when hens are really young, and two is when they're grossly overweight. The chickens that lay the eggs you buy never really get overweight."

Your eggs, Deena, were likely laid by what Robinson called "overexcited teenage chickens" with hyper-stimulated ovaries; not due to added hormones, but because that's natural at their age.

If a farmer's flock is all young chickens, nearly all the large and extra large eggs they produce will be double-yolked. Eggs are sorted by weight. Because of the way they're processed and shipped, it's common for a dozen to all be from the same farm. Therefore it's not uncommon for all or most eggs in one carton to be doubles, Robinson explained.

Robinson said it drives him nuts when eggs are marketed as "raised without added hormones": chickens have been raised without hormones, by law, since the 1960s.

I think the lesson here is about staying skeptical (not contrarian or obtuse, just skeptical), about the "facts" we take for granted — like the idea that chickens are raised with artificial hormones, an issue that has drawn a lot of public concern.

Hormones are used in agriculture in Canada, but not in poultry or pork production. If we decide, as a community, that's not something we want to do, we have to make that decision based on sound science, not panic.

ANALYSIS

Studios try to make bank on humanizing our furry pals

Richard Crouse

For Metro Canada

Broad vocabulary, grammar and syntax are the domain of humans, but science tells us millions of species communicate by using body language and intuitive calls. Chimps can be taught to sign simple phrases and elephants have individual sounds to signify danger and emotions, but complex storytelling is left to us humans.

Unless you're at the movies. This year, theatres have been overrun by hordes of anthropomorphic animals. From Zootopia and Nine Lives to The Secret Lives of Pets and The Jungle Book, animals have been talking up a storm.

This weekend The Wild Life becomes the latest animated film to tell a story from the point of view of wildlife. A riff on Daniel Defoe's classic tale of survival, Robinson Crusoe, the film's narrator is a bright red parrot named Mak (David Howard).

In this version, Crusoe crash lands on an island where animals rule and must work with the chatty Mak, a tapir named

Rosie and Kiki the kingfisher to save their home from an invasion by some savage felines.

Disney has the grandest tradition of talking animals — Mickey Mouse to The Little Mermaid's Sebastian the Crab and Jiminy Cricket to name just a few — but they are not the only ones putting words into our pet's mouths.

Flushed Away comes from Aardman, the animation company behind Wallace and Gromit.

The story of an upper class pet mouse flushed down the loo by a bullying rat features great animation, an all-star British voice cast and something that all kids love — toilet humour. It swirls along at quite a clip, effortlessly mixing literate verbal and visual jokes — we glimpse a cockroach reading Kafka's Metamorphosis — with potty humour that'll appeal to the kids.

G-Force's talking crime fighting guinea pigs come courtesy of uber-producer Jerry Bruckheimer. The voice cast includes not one, but two Oscar winners, which may be an indication that the recession has finally taken root in Hollywood.

When the best gig Penelope Cruz can get involves saying lines like "Oh, I have to save his fur again?" you know times are tight for A-listers.

Pixar's Ratatouille is an unusual cross between America's Next Top Chef and Willard. Remy (voiced by Patton Oswalt) is a sophisticated rodent with a highly developed sense of smell and a wicked sense of humour.

While his rat brothers and sisters are happy to simply survive by scavenging through the garbage, Remy aspires to culinary greatness. Ratatouille does something no other film has been able to — not that a lot of have tried — it makes rats cute, lovable even.

On the live action front, Zookeeper, or as any Kevin James movie could be called, "Fat Guy Falling Down... A Lot," plays like Dr. Doolittle if Dr. Doolittle was a romantic comedy for kids. Luckily the animals come to the rescue. Luckily the monkey from The Hangover 2 has some of the film's best lines. Adam Sandler provides the monkey voice, but also listen for the beastly vocal work of Cher, Nick Nolte, Don Rickles and Sylvester Stallone.

Wear white after Labour Day, you rebel

Lauren Pelley
Torstar News Service

On Tuesday morning, the day after Labour Day, I rifled through my drawers for something cool to wear in the stifling September heat.

I settled on white jeans.

Makes sense, doesn't it? The nearly 30 degree temperatures this week in Toronto have been overwhelming. And from a calendar perspective, the seasons don't change until after the Fall Equinox on Sept. 22.

But, as I slid on my snow-white denim, I heard an unidentifiable woman's voice in my head screech "Don't wear white after Labour Day!"

Is it my mother's voice or that of my style-savvy departed grandmother? I don't think so. Is it a proclamation from a '90s women's magazine or local news segment? Quite possibly. Or, perhaps, it was just some cliché that's been tossed around in conversations long enough to become ingrained in my head.

Wearing white after this arbitrary date seems, then, a mild but delightful act of rebellion. A middle finger to social norms, a casting aside of a time-honoured tradition — and an acknowledgment that this no-white custom is silly and classist in the first place.

In early 1900s America, the summer season ended with Labour Day, according to the etiquette experts of the Emily Post Institute. "Society flocked en masse" from their city homes to seaside cottages or mountain cabins, and swapped formal attire for lighter, white summer outfits. When summer ended, the wardrobes were swapped yet again. "It was an age when there was a dress code for practically every occasion, and the signal to mark the change between summer resort clothes and clothing worn for the rest of the year was encapsulated in the dictum 'No white after Labor (sic) Day,'" reads an advice page on the Institute's website.

"Society," of course, can be read as the upper echelons of society, a leisure class that could afford seasonal wardrobes and gallivant between their summer and winter homes.

These days, magazines are shifting gears — "Of course you can wear white after Labour Day," Chatelaine proclaimed just this week — and plenty of men and women have long scoffed at the notion of ditching their lighter wardrobe staples in the fall because some elitists said so a century ago.

It's just one of many fashion "rules" slowly fading away. Modern stylists and fashion writers talk about ways to wear brown and black together, or navy and black, or whatever other colours have long been deemed taboo.

Still, you may hear someone scoff at your white jeans in September, citing that century-old Labour Day dictum, and not realizing where it comes from.

To that, I say: Rules — particularly the dumb ones — are made to be broken.

Sisters say they're more confident at NY Fashion Week

It was quite the family fashion day for Kendall and Kylie Jenner, who came straight from brother-in-law Kanye West's Yeezy show on Roosevelt Island off Manhattan on Wednesday to their own party celebrating their fashion label, KENDALL + KYLIE.

The fashionista sisters (and reality TV stars) said they were gradually becoming more confident designers with each new collection.

"I think that every season we get more and more comfortable," said Kendall, 20, who as a model is a frequent presence on top-designer runways at Fashion Week. "It's super-awesome. The line grows with us."

Added Kylie, 19, also expected to be hitting the runway this week: "We've learned how to work with each other better. I mean, everything down to certain fabrics and patterns. We definitely learned a lot."

The sisters said they've benefited from appearing as models for designers they admire.

"I think it's cool to be able to see both sides," Kendall said.

"I get to see the designers that I work with who are obviously on a much higher level than our brand at the moment."

"It's cool to see their process and what they have to go through behind the scenes, because it's kind of a goal to set and somewhere that I would like to be one day."

At the party, in the multi-tiered, technology-heavy Samsung 837 venue in downtown Manhattan, guests sipped cocktails and munched on hors d'oeuvres as they examined the new collection — heavy on leather, both black and white.

Spray-paint artist Malcom Stuart was on hand to decorate T-shirts with his own custom emojis; One could also get a leather backpack monogrammed on the spot.

Many in the crowd had just spent the afternoon in the hot sun at West's marathon, al

"It was so awesome," said Kylie.

Son of Spock boldly goes into the past

INTERVIEW

Adam Nimoy delves into life with the man behind the ears

Steve Gow
For Metro Canada

The son of Star Trek legend Leonard Nimoy remembers the first time he realized just how famous his father actually was.

Adam Nimoy was much younger then, and even though he also loved a new TV show called Star Trek, the son of Spock wasn't prepared for the barrage of fans that accosted the pair during a family visit to a West Los Angeles carnival.

"We were mobbed and had to leave immediately, it was really a weird scene," said Nimoy while promoting his film For the Love of Spock. "That was when I realized that things had changed forever — we were no longer experiencing the same lives we'd been leading."

For the actor's son, it also meant a lifelong struggle with his complex relationship to the man behind the pointy-eared Vulcan who has been part of the zeitgeist for 50 years.

Originally envisaged as a tribute to the character of Spock, the film quickly became an exploration of the father-son relationship after Leonard Nimoy's death last year.

"He had great humility — he wanted it to be focused primarily about Spock, not on the brilliant career of Leonard Nimoy," recalled the 60-year-old filmmaker.

"(But) after he died, it became clear that so many people were affected by my dad's career and who he was as a human being that we needed to include his life and legacy as well."

As such, Nimoy interviewed such series' luminaries as William Shatner and Trek revivalist J.J. Abrams to discuss their memories even as he explores his own discordant relationship with his famous father.

Still, as contentious as the Nimoy's youthful relationship was, Adam was always an admirer of Mr. Spock. Ironically, it was this experience of fighting with fans for the affections of his own father that perhaps made him relate most to the character.

"This idea of being an outsider seems to be the number one reason why Spock has resonated with so many people," said Nimoy.

"There are a lot of great documentary filmmakers out there who could've done a great job on Mr. Spock and Leonard Nimoy but no one could've told my perspective, my particular unique story."

Leonard Nimoy's wild fame led to many struggles for his son Adam, with whom he had a complex relationship. CONTRIBUTED

QUOTED

The misunderstood Leonard Nimoy

"People confused him with Mr. Spock and asked him what it was like to live on Vulcan," explained Nimoy of his dad naming his autobiography I Am Not Spock. "Up until the very last years of his life, he was trying to explain how he mistitled that book."

The power of Spock

"Spock is great to look at, number one. He's just so compelling and so interesting," said Nimoy of the character's resonance. "Spock was the guy who stood up and said it's cool to be an outsider."

Spock, before and after

"After my dad passed away there was this huge outpouring of emotion from everywhere," said Nimoy of the documentary's shift in focus to pay homage to the actor behind Spock. STEVE GOW/METRO

Equality a struggle in Hollywood: Study

DIVERSITY

Report finds women, LGBT, minorities still largely left out

Despite widespread attention over diversity in the movie business, a new study finds that little is changing in Hollywood for women, minorities, LGBT people and others who continue to find themselves on the outside of an industry where researchers say inequality is "the norm."

A report to be released Wednesday by the Media, Diversity and Social Change Initiative at the University of Southern California's Annenberg School for Communication and Journalism offers a stark portrait of Hollywood's feeble to nonexistent progress in eradicating what researchers call "pervasive and systematic" problems in inclusiveness in front of and behind the camera.

Since 2007, USC has analyzed the demographic makeup of the actors, directors, writers and more from each year's 100 most popular films. Its latest addition adds data from 2015, but finds little change.

For example, 31.4 per cent of speaking characters in the analyzed films were female in 2015 — roughly the same number as in 2007. That's a ratio of 2.2 men for every single woman.

Characters identified as lesbian, gay or transgender accounted for less than 1 per cent of all speaking parts, or 32 out of 4,370 characters studied. That was a slight increase from 19 portrayals in 2014. After finding zero transgender characters in 2014, researchers could pinpoint one in 2015.

From 2007 to 2015, the study finds no significant change in the percentage of black (12.2 per cent), Latino (5.3 per cent) or Asian (3.9 per cent) characters in the most popular films.

Off screen, of the 107 directors of 2015 films, four were black or African American and six were Asian or Asian American. Just eight were women, still the most since 2008.

"We're seeing entrenched inequality," said Stacy L. Smith, a USC professor and the study's lead author. "Despite all the chatter and all the activism and all the press attention, it's another year where the status quo has been maintained."

USC researchers stressed that the study's results didn't just offer a portrait of inequality, but captured the invisibility of many from American popular cinema. Hollywood, the study concludes, is "an epicenter of cultural inequality."

Issues of exclusion and gender gaps have gained more attention in recent years following two straight seasons of all-white acting nominees at the Oscars and leaked studio emails from Sony Pictures that suggested evidence of disparity in salaries between male and female stars.

The fallout has led the Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences to diversify its membership. Some have individually taken action; TV producer Ryan Murphy in February launched a foundation to diversify the directors of his shows. Last month,

IN CANADA

Telefilm Canada has vowed to reflect more diversity on screen in the next four years. On Thursday, the Crown corporation announced a goal to build, by 2020, "a more representative and diversified feature film portfolio that better reflects gender, diversity and Canada's indigenous communities." The plan includes focusing on how to enhance existing diversity initiatives.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

even Michelle Obama spoke of the importance "for the world to see different images of each other."

But the USC researchers say not enough is being done by the upper echelons of the movie industry. Earlier this year, the researchers scored 10 major media companies on their diversity record across mediums.

None passed.

"When we really drill down in the numbers, we see a perpetuation of the same groups getting access to the most visible roles, whether that's in the director's chair or on screen, and that continues to be the problem plaguing Hollywood's hiring practices," said Smith.

Man behind biopic weighs in on Sully

SULLY SULLENBERGER

Retired pilot relives Miracle on the Hudson on big screen

Richard Crouse

For Metro Canada

On January 15, 2009, Sully Sullenberger was an airplane captain with 42 years of experience piloting a plane on a routine run from New York's LaGuardia Airport to a stopover at Charlotte Douglas International Airport. The next day he was a worldwide hero; an instant celebrity.

Shortly after takeoff his plane was disabled by a flock of Canadian Geese who flew into the engines, knocking out the plane's navigating system. In just under four minutes Sullenberger assessed the situation and, realizing there was no time to turn back, made the decision to land the craft on the Hudson River. The risky landing was successful and all 155 passengers and crew survived with only minor injuries.

Tom Hanks portrays the former U.S. Airways captain in Clint Eastwood's latest directorial offering. HANDOUT/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

To this day the now-retired pilot says that when he flies "other passengers often tell me, 'I feel so much safer now that you're on the airplane with us.' I'm not quite sure why they do, but I'm just glad they do."

The Miracle on the Hudson, as the New York press dubbed it, is now the subject of Sully, a biopic from director Clint Eastwood and star Tom Hanks.

"Watching the film, especially in the IMAX format makes you feel like you're on that flight with us," Sullenberger said, though it thankfully doesn't bring back the anxiety of the day for him.

"Enough time has passed, and I've had enough time to process this and make it a part of me and not something that just happened to me," he said. "I don't have quite the same emotions I had during that day, that flight, but the very first time I saw this film with my family it was a very emotional experience for all of us. The second time ... I was able to take it in as more of a usual movie-going experience and see some of the things I wasn't able to see the first time."

As for having Oscar winner Hanks portray him, Sullenberger said the two "talked in some detail about the script and the obligation (Hanks) felt to get it right because after the film was completed I would be going back to living my life and would have to live with however he portrayed me on screen."

Now that the movie is complete, he added that "it is a weird experience to see someone else onscreen portraying you and speaking words you actually spoke."

Sullenberger's story doesn't end with the landing. In the years since he has been named one of Time magazine's 100 Most Influential Heroes and Icons, written bestselling books and become a spokesman for St. Jude Children's Research Hospital. It's a whirlwind that changed his life forever.

"My family and I think of this story in two phases. There was the trauma of that flight itself — and then the trauma of suddenly becoming a world recognized public figure," he said. "Within a few months we had received 50,000 communications. Emails, letters, requests. The press was camped outside our house for 10 days. It was just overwhelming. It very quickly required finding a new way of living this life as public figures."

"We had to become more complete versions of ourselves to be able to do that."

Kanye West show a literal hot mess

Anna Wintour, centre, braves the heat on Roosevelt Island to take in Kanye West's fashion show. GETTY IMAGES

NY FASHION WEEK

Crowd sweats as rapper unveils Yeezy Season 4

In sweltering heat, set to a slow, morose soundtrack, Kanye West debuted the fourth season of his Yeezy collection for Adidas at a park memorializing Franklin D. Roosevelt's famous four freedoms: of speech and worship, from want and fear.

Helping to kick off New York Fashion Week, West lured the fashion crowd, along with wife Kim Kardashian and two of her famous sisters, Kendall and Kylie Jenner, to Roosevelt Island just off Manhattan on Wednesday.

There, "multicultural" models, per his criticized casting call over the long holiday weekend, stood under a blazing sun as they greeted sweaty guests in beige and black leotards, bodysuits and other clingy, revealing foundation garments. Some were thonged. Some were two pieced and under-boobed. Some were non-distinct.

The invited sought refuge under the few trees available once the hour-long show finally began at Franklin D. Roosevelt Four Freedoms Park, featuring white monuments to his 1941 "four freedoms" state of the union address and anchored by a triangular grassy knoll used by the rapper.

A handful of more than 100 models hired for the marathon afternoon (as opposed to fashion shows that usually take 10 minutes or so) just plain sat down in the grass where they stood barefoot, felled by sizzling temperatures and walking once or twice to a box of bottled water set up at the front just for them.

Music by performance artist Vanessa Beecroft heralded more models who actually walked, on a white runway that rimmed the knoll in thigh-high boots, including one poor soul whose stiletto-heeled pair weren't strong enough to hold her, forcing a sad wobble in her step.

The clothes the walkers wore were simple, loose fleece hooded looks and fall zip coats, leaving one to wonder whether the anticipated Yeezy Season 4 was worth risking dehydration and time suck for the fashion industry.

Certainly the models were happy for the hype job and relieved to hightail it out of the sun at the same time. Among West's walkers was a fierce-looking Teyana Taylor, the star of his new Fade video. Among his other celeb guests: Pharrell, Spike Jonze and Tyga.

CONSEIL COMMUNAUTAIRE DU GRAND HAVRE

Bringing French and English worlds together

For several years, the Conseil Communautaire du Grand-Havre (CCGH) has worked at fostering the global development of the French speaking community within the HRM. Whether Acadian, Francophone, Francophile or Anglophone, CCGH welcomes all to explore their variety of programs and services.

"We do not only work for the Acadians or Francophones, but for the entire HRM," says Élisabeth Houle, communication and administration officer. "We want to create a movement to inspire but also to reach more people to learn and speak French."

The CCGH has set a goal to reach out to more Anglophones over the next few years to join in on activities that cultivate an interest in French.

"Sept. 16 is the official launch of our event calendar for 2016-2017," Houle says. "At the same time, we will be presenting our new visual identity and our new newspaper, The Franco. It's a great year to do those changes since CCGH is celebrating 25 years of community involvement."

The CCGH offers many programs, activities and services in HRM, including French summer camps, a newspaper, shows, community events, literary workshops in schools and a scholarship program.

"It shines the spotlight on Acadian and Francophone communities of Halifax through multiple cultural and artistic presentations," Houle says. "It provides visibility and opportunities for numerous cultural groups to present them to all of Nova Scotia and beyond."

BRITISH COLUMBIA

Charming, quaint, Gibsons also a magnet for art lovers

Howe Sound is glass-still on the voyage from Gibsons Landing to Keats Island, save for the odd motorboat wake jostling the kayak.

The peace is also broken momentarily as a seal bursts out of the water, letting out a hearty snort before it dives back beneath the surface.

Gibsons is a quaint and colourful town at the southern end of British Columbia's Sunshine Coast, a 180-kilometre stretch of picturesque oceanside communities and jagged coastline along the Strait of Georgia.

Many visitors to Gibsons get a kick out of the numerous nods to the long-running Canadian sitcom The Beachcombers, which was filmed in the town and ran from 1972 to 1990.

The Persephone, the tug piloted in the show by log salvager Nick Adonidas (played by Bruno Gerussi), sits on a prominent street corner in the centre of town, right by Molly's Reach, the cafe where much of the action took place.

"Someone gets their picture taken every day in front of Molly's Reach," says bed-and-breakfast owner Celia Robben, who heads up Sunshine Coast Tourism.

"To a specific demographic, it's definitely a draw... If you're under 30, you don't have a clue."

Most visitors arrive at the Sunshine Coast via ferry from Vancouver's Horseshoe Bay. The northern part of the Sunshine Coast can also be accessed by ferry from Comox, on Vancouver Island.

Robben estimates up to half a million visitors come to the region every year, though the summer is by far the busiest time. The permanent population is only about a tenth of that.

"We're very much a cottage country for Vancouver and the Lower Mainland," she says.

Robben and her husband moved to Gibsons about a decade ago from Houston to open their B&B, Arcturus Retreats. She recalls making the decision while on a ski vacation in Whistler.

"As we were driving up the Sea-to-Sky (Highway), we were looking over at the Sunshine Coast, seeing our future home at a distance," she says. That was in February.

"By July, we were househunting."

Outdoor activities are a big draw, says Robben. In a climate where temperatures rarely dip below 0 C, kayaking, mountain biking and hiking can be done year-round.

The Sunshine Coast is also a magnet for art lovers, Robben says, with painters, potters, jewelry makers and glass blowers setting up shop in the region.

A purple banner outside an artists' studio signifies that the public is welcome to pop in. An "art crawl" is set for Oct. 21-23 along the Sunshine Coast Highway. Last year's event included 125 venues.

Former Rust Belt city has bounced back

Emanuela Campanella
For Torstar News Service

Walking down the streets of the Waterloo Arts District, I stumbled upon an indie record shop called Blue Arrow Records. I felt like I was walking on music history, with floors covered in old record posters. Dracula's greatest hits were underneath my right foot and nearby was Elvis Presley looking oh so handsome.

At that moment, I realized, Cleveland is a special place. "What's there to do in Cleveland?" my family had asked me.

Well, it's a little jewel that Canadians tend to bypass for cities like New York and Chicago.

One corner of the Waterloo Arts District looked like a revitalized junk yard, sprinkled with what looks like Christmas lights and sculptures. This is Cleveland now — revitalized through arts.

Like Pittsburgh or Detroit, Cleveland was part of the Rust Belt. It lost a lot of people when the manufacturing industry collapsed.

Thanks to tax credits, low property cost and a huge investment into the arts, Cleveland's population has now bounced back.

The city is home to 78th Street Studios, 170,000 square feet of art galleries, artist studios, performance spaces and music recording studios. Every third Friday of the month, the "eclectic art maze," originally home to the Baker Electric Motor Vehicle Co., opens for a night of visual exhibits.

You will see metal track doors and old freight elevators where the cars were once taken down to the loading docks for distribution. Now the place is roaming with creative types who've put their love and sweat into their paintings, photographs and sculptures.

Besides the burgeoning arts movement, Cleveland has a long history with music. At the Rock & Roll Hall of Fame, you literally go through the majestic evolution of music.

There's Michael Jackson's sparkly glove, Janis Joplin's psychedelic Porsche and scribbled lyrics from the Beatles.

With the world's largest collection of rock artifacts, the Hall of Fame reminds you that music lives strong, no matter what political unrest or turmoil is happening across the globe.

On a smaller scale, the Happy Dog at Euclid Tavern is an ultra retro bar that has become an institution and a true Cleveland treasure for live music. I sank my teeth into a gourmet hot dog topped with Froot Loops during the kitsch "Polka Happy Hour." Only here will you get an intimate show by Cleveland Orchestra musicians.

If you're feeling fancy, go to Severance Hall to catch the Cleveland Orchestra. There's something chilling about hearing 100 members of the orchestra perform together for a full-on classical experience.

New Huskies coach brings the swagger

CIS FOOTBALL

Colzie certain he will lead team back to its winning ways

Philip Croucher
Metro | Halifax

A once proud club, the Saint Mary's Huskies football program took a complete nose-dive the past two seasons.

For back-to-back years, the Huskies went 0-8 and missed the playoffs — unheard of for a team with three Vanier Cups to its history, and normally amongst the best in all of CIS.

The dismal performances resulted in the firing of head coach Perry Marchese last November. He was replaced by James Colzie III, a longtime assistant in both the CFL and CIS, who worked under former Huskies coach Blake Nill last season with the UBC Thunderbirds.

In talking to the 41-year-old ahead of the team's season opener Saturday against the Acadia Axemen in Wolfville, it's almost like the past two years never happened.

He wants to bring a new voice to the program with the goal of climbing back to the top. Those past two years, you need not mention.

James Colzie III took over as head coach in February. MONA GHIZ/CONTRIBUTED

"I'm not hoping to be successful, I know we will be successful," said Colzie, a native of Miami, who took over as coach in February.

In fact, the only past Colzie talks about is from those who have enjoyed success with the program, including Nill, who brought back-to-back CIS titles to Saint Mary's in 2001 and 2002.

"They need to understand how important this is ... not just to them but the entire Huskies family," Colzie said of the football tradition Saint Mary's has. "I want that to resonate with our players."

This is a completely new-look Huskies team, as Colzie and his staff went out and brought in a large recruiting class, including fourth-year NCAA transfer Brock Berglund as the team's starting quarterback.

Colzie said the key is Berglund, who is coming from the University of Northern Colorado, where he served mostly as backup.

"I think it always starts and ends with the quarterback. And it builds off of that," he said.

"He just understands how to prepare and it's rubbing off on some of the guys who maybe don't know that."

A positive for the Huskies already: they defeated the Axemen at home 31-8 in the team's lone exhibition game.

But Colzie, while confident, knows the game is played on the field and starting Saturday it's time for everyone to perform.

"Nothing has been given to me. I have had to work for it," he said of getting to his goal of being a head coach. "Just like this team. Nothing will be given to them."

WORLD CUP OF HOCKEY

Canada welcomes agitator's grit, goals

Stocked with No. 1 draft picks, Hart, Norris and Vezina Trophy winners, Team Canada has no one else quite like the five-foot-nine feisty ball of energy that is Brad Marchand.

Few in hockey, for that matter, are quite like him.

"Small, slow and ugly?" Tyler Seguin, a former Boston Bruins teammate, said with a chuckle. "No, there's not many Brad Marchands out there."

Seguin affectionately refers to him as "the rat" but as he points out, the 28-year-old has evolved into something much more than just an agitator.

"He's very good at what he does," Seguin said this week at Canada's camp in preparation for the World Cup of Hockey.

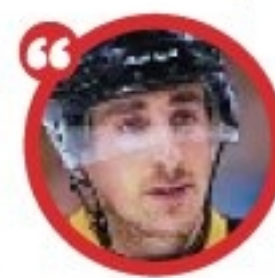

"Especially the last few years he's found the right line between getting under other players' skin, but also being disciplined. I think he was trying to figure that out his first year that I was playing with him. And he's really found it now."

A Halifax native, Marchand scored a career-high 37 goals last season, fifth-best in the NHL, right alongside more heralded scorers like Steven Stamkos, Jamie Benn and Corey Perry.

That production, combined with a still feisty brand —

he ranked 19th in minor penalties last year despite Seguin's assertions — was enough to earn him a spot with Canada, edging Taylor Hall, a former No. 1 overall pick. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Brown keeping Norman quiet

NFL SEASON OPENER

Trash-talking Redskin has a lot of respect for Steelers WR

The fast-talking cornerback that never met a wide receiver he didn't like to mess with is taking a decidedly different approach when it comes to Antonio Brown.

No shade. No sarcasm. No passive-aggressive taunting from Josh Norman heading into Washington's opener against the Pittsburgh Steelers. Goaded Odell Beckham is one thing. Doing the same with a player who is treating his club's record book like a dry erase board is something else entirely.

"Now coming in and just watching him and what he's able to do, it's just freakish," Norman said. "When you look at a wide receiver in the NFL, you don't have to stop nowhere other than Antonio Brown. It starts and it ends with him."

With an emphasis — the Redskins hope — on "end."

The offence that takes the field on Monday night won't exactly look like the one the Steelers envisioned heading into 2016. Running back Le'Veon Bell will spend the first three weeks serving a suspension for violating the league's substance abuse policy.

Wide receiver Martavis Bryant is sitting out the entire season because of drug issues of his own. Tight end Ladarius Green — signed to fill the void left by Heath Miller's retirement — is on the physically unable to perform list and it's anybody's guess on when he'll return.

Their absence makes Brown that much more valuable while simultaneously making the Steelers that much more vulnerable if Washington finds a way to neutralize him.

While the Redskins are keeping mum on whether Norman's No. 24 will shadow Brown no matter where he lines up in offensive co-ordinator Todd Haley's imaginative scheme, Brown insists he doesn't care one way or the other.

Asked Thursday if he expects Norman to follow him, Brown joked "I think a lot of people follow me on Twitter, Snapchat, Instagram."

Keeping one of the NFL's best in check would make for an audacious first impression. Maybe that's why for once Norman isn't trying to make his words speak as loudly as his actions.

"I have nothing, but respect for that guy," Norman said.

Washington pitcher Strasburg suffers injury

Nationals pitcher Stephen Strasburg has a strained flexor mass in his right elbow, and there is no timetable for his return.

Washington director of athletic training Paul Lesard says the injury is not season ending and the ligament Strasburg had repaired with Tommy John surgery in 2011 is unaffected. Strasburg left his start Wednesday after feeling a pinch in the back of his elbow. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Galaxy's Donovan may come out of retirement

Landon Donovan appears set to come out of retirement and rejoin the Los Angeles Galaxy. The team tweeted "He's back" on Thursday along with a video of Donovan putting on a No. 26 Galaxy jersey.

Now 34, Donovan retired after the Galaxy won the 2014 Major League Soccer title. Earlier that year, Donovan was controversially cut from the U.S. roster, denying him a trip to a fourth World Cup. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RECIPE Garlic Apple Grilled Cheese

Ceri Marsh & Laura Keogh
For Metro Canada

If you're looking for a way to switch up your humble grilled cheese, allow us to introduce you to our garlic apple version. You may never just grill a few slices of cheese between bread again.

Ready in 15 minutes

Prep time: 5 minutes
Cook time: 10 minutes
Serves 4

Ingredients

- 1 Tbsp butter
- 1 clove garlic, grated
- 1 Gala apple, peeled and thinly sliced
- 4 pieces of multi-grain bread
- 1/2 cup crumbled, aged cheddar

Directions

1. In a medium frying pan, melt butter over medium heat. Add garlic and sauté till garlic is translucent, about 2 minutes.

2. Toss in apples and sauté until soft, about 2 to 3 minutes. Remove apples and place on a clean plate.

3. In the same pan, place a slice of bread and then cover the top with the shaved cheddar. Lay slice of apple atop cheese and then cap with the other slice of bread. Cook until the underside becomes a gold brown then flip. Remove from the pan and serve when the cheese melts thoroughly and the top is also a golden brown. Repeat with other two slices of bread.

Grab every chance to take a vacation and enjoy the arts, sports, fun times and flirtations in the next 12 months. Plan on lots of vacations in the next year!

Cancer June 22 - July 23
For the next 12 months, you have fabulous opportunities in real estate! If you cannot speculate in real estate, you can at least improve your own home

Leo July 24 - Aug. 23
Your everyday experiences, encounters and relationships will be super positive in the next year. This blesses all your dealings with relatives, siblings and neighbors.

Virgo Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
Finally, in the year ahead, you will have a chance to make more money. Not only will you boost your income, many of you will make major purchases as well.

Libra Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Today Lucky Jupiter moves into your sign for the first time since 2005. This brings you great good fortune! Expect sunny days ahead.

Scorpio Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
For the next year, you will be quietly confident, because your focus will be on your inner development. Use this time to plan what you want your future to be all about.

Sagittarius Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Do not feel worried if you are discouraged today. It's just one of those things. But the truth is, you can see what really is happening. Therefore, do nothing. Be safe.

Capricorn Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Although you want to travel to expand your world through an increase in learning and knowledge, something is holding you back. The bottom line is that it is self-doubt: Don't listen to this voice.

Aquarius Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Do not be discouraged if someone older is critical of you. Basically, some kind of misunderstanding is the cause. Do not take it personally.

Pisces Feb. 20 - March 20
This is a poor day to make important decisions or to accept instructions or direction from anyone in a position of authority. Everything is confusing!
